Headline:
Another fine and dry day.

Today:
Another cold start, but soon turning warm and fine with plenty of sunshine. Remaining dry into the afternoon with high cloud moving in from the west, making the sunshine hazy. Maximum temperature 18 deg C (64 deg F).

Tonight:
Quickly turning chilly this evening with conditions staying dry and mostly clear apart from high cloud in places. Frost likely for prone spots, especially under clear skies. Minimum temperature 0 deg C (32 deg F).

Saturday:
Fine and dry after a chilly start, it will become brighter during the afternoon as high cloud gradually disperses through the day. Another chilly night with frost possible. Maximum temperature 18 deg C (64 deg F).

Outlook for Sunday to Tuesday:
Fine and dry on Sunday. Cloudier on Monday with rain moving in overnight before a rather wet Tuesday. Warm at first, but turning cooler, with a continued overnight frost risk.
